

SHADOW, BUT NO "COMING EVENT"

Burglar on Roof of Silver Factory Just a Tailor in a Near Window.

A sharp ringing of the telephone at Police Headquarters early to-day was followed by a man's voice over the wire in this excited whisper:

"This is the Gotham Manufacturing Company, Thirty-sixth street and Fifth avenue. I am Walter L. Hood, the night watchman. There are burglars in the house. Hurry the police!"

The police of the West Thirtieth street station were told that there was millions of dollars' worth of silver in the Gotham establishment and that the call was urgent. Hood telephoned twice again. Both times he said burglars were still in the place, and begged for police assistance without delay.

The reserve police in charge of Roundsmen Burns and Powers arrived at the Gotham establishment, hurried by a fast run. Hood was all excitement. He told the police the burglars were on the roof. The police were placed about the block and the big factory was entered.

The police had not long to wait before they saw a mysterious shadow coming down from the skylight. Men ran to the roof, but there was no burglar. Then they saw a tailor at a window next door in the rear, busy dressing clothes. The tailor had cast the shadow.

No arrest was made.

SUBWAY TRAIN MANGLES EMPLOYEE

Women Faint as Victim's Torn Body Is Laid Upon Platform.

Harry Bauman, twenty-one years of age, of No. 322 Brook avenue, a ticket chopper at the Eighteenth street Subway station, while crossing the tracks late last night was struck by an express train, sustaining a crushed right leg and right arm and a scalp wound. He was removed to the New York Hospital in a critical condition.

Bauman had crossed tracks at the same time every night to get lunch on which was left for him. He safely dodged a southbound express and failed to notice another north bound. Before the expressman could stop the train, Bauman stopped directly in front of it. The first car hurled him ahead of the train and to one side, leaving his body outside of the rail, with his right arm and leg on it. His head was thrown against a pillar. The wheels of the train passed over the man's leg and arm, almost severing them from his body.

When Dr. Cottle arrived in an ambulance, besides caring for Bauman, he had to revive two women, who fainted when the injured man was laid on the platform.

CLEVER SLEUTH'S DEATH A MYSTERY

Detective Miller, Found Shot in Fairmount Park, Was Famous Worker.

PHILADELPHIA, April 24.—There is much mystery in the alleged suicide by shooting of Harry Miller, the detective, who was found dead in Fairmount Park.

Miller had been the hardest working detective in Philadelphia. He had worked on every big criminal case in this city for the past several years, and was looked upon as a man who knew not fear and who could not be corrupted. He had solved mysteries that have been considered hopeless. That he should have shot himself to death cannot be explained in any way, especially at this time.
